

HAVING A (SNOW)BALL: MIDSTATE ENJOYS FLURRY OF WINTER FUN

Laurens County and Middle Georgia were in the sweet spot of a rare snowstorm in these parts on Sunday. Sleet turned to big, chunky flakes midmorning, dumping from 1 to 2 inches of snow across the county before the storm tapered off around lunch. As the sun came out and temperatures rose, most of the snow melted away by the end of the day. But locals still had ample opportunity to enjoy the brief snow day, as shown in these photos submitted by readers Erica Green, April Burney, Erin Smith Raley and Deanna Roberson. Council hires new city clerk

By PAYTON TOWNS III
Senior Reporter

Dorothy Rozier broke into a big smile as she shook hands with Superior Court Chief Judge Jon Helton after she was sworn in as the city of Dublin's new city clerk.

The ceremony took place at the beginning of last Thursday's meeting, after the council approved Rozier by voting her into the position.

"Thank you mayor pro tempore, mayor and council for your trust and confidence," Rozier said. "I am honored to serve as the city clerk for the city of Dublin. I am looking forward to working with each of you in the new capacity. To my fellow appointees and colleagues, I look forward to collaborating as we serve our community. To my family and friends, thank you for being here. I thank you for your support. It means more than I can say. I'm honored by this opportunity and committed to the work ahead."

Mayor Pro Tem Bennie Jones began the meeting asking everyone to keep Dublin Mayor Joshua Kight and his family in prayers with the passing of his father, Billy Kight, who was also the Laurens County attorney.

Also, the council approved a contract with Foresite Group LLC to develop a comprehensive safety action plan for Safe Streets 4 All grant.

"We were notified that we were awarded this grant," said Dublin City Manager Josh Powell. "The Foresite Group was highly recommended and very well qualified to do this work for us."

Powell said the group has helped other communities develop safety plans. The purpose is to try to eliminate

Stanley to continue oversight role on Georgia Coroner's Training Council

SPECIAL TO THE COURIER HERALD

Laurens County Coroner Richard N. Stanley III has been reappointed to the Georgia Coroner's Training Council following a recommendation from Gov. Brian Kemp, according to an announcement made on behalf of the Georgia Board of Public Safety.

Stanley says he is grateful for the continued confidence placed in him and remains committed to upholding high professional standards for coroners across the state.

"I am truly humbled and honored that Gov. Brian Kemp has reconsidered and recommended my reappointment to the Georgia Coroner's Training Council," Stanley said. "Serving in this role is a responsibility I do not take lightly."

"I remain committed to serving with integrity, accountability and respect for the citizens of Georgia, and I am thankful for the opportunity to continue this important work," Stanley said.

The reappointment allows Stanley to continue working alongside other professionals to ensure the integrity and effectiveness of Georgia's death investigation system. The Georgia Coroner's Training Council plays a critical role in promoting professionalism, accountability and consistency in death investigations statewide.

Many may not realize that coroners and deputy coroners in Georgia must meet strict training and

OBITUARIES

Grace Caneega Claxton

Grace Caneega Claxton, 90, passed away peacefully on the morning of Jan. 15, 2026 at Scott Health and Rehab in Scott, Georgia.

Grace was the fifth child born to Henry Brinson Caneega and Addie Crawford Caneega on April 8,1935.

She grew up on their family farm in Johnson County, and graduated from Wrightsville High School. After graduation, she attended Wesleyan College in Macon Georgia, and later returned home to marry her childhood sweetheart, Lovett Lamar Claxton, whom she affectionately called "Sonny."

Grace was the director for the Johnson County Training Center in Wrightsville, Georgia, until she retired, and she also served on the District Mental Health Board. She was a lifelong member of Arline/Bethel Church, Wrightsville, Georgia, where she served on many church committees, and became the pianist for Arline/Bethel at the age of 10. She held that title for 69 years.

Grace had a love for music, and her children and grandchildren will always cherish the memories of gathering around her baby grand piano on Christmas Eve and singing Christmas carols as she played.

She also had a passion for art and gardening, and in her spare time you would find her painting or working in her flower garden. She loved to cook, and was very good at it. Her children, grandchildren, nieces and nephews always looked forward to her delicious Brunswick stew.

She held many talents and titles, but her greatest to her family was "Mama Grace." She was a devoted mother and grandmother, and always put her family first.

Grace is preceded in death by her parents Henry Brinson and Addie Crawford Caneega, her husband, Lovett Lamar Claxton, her brothers, H.B. Caneega, Mac Caneega, Lamar "Buddy" Caneega, her sisters, Billie Caneega Bogue and Betty Caneega Paul, and her great grandson Christopher Lane Claxton.

Grace is survived by her children, David Claxton (Deborah) Wrightsville, Ga., Artie Claxton (Freida), Wrightsville, Ga., Lisa Claxton Blanchard (Whit), Augusta, Ga., and Neil Claxton (Deanna) Wrightsville, Ga.. Her grandchildren, Wendi Claxton, Clay Claxton (Valya), Whitney Blanchard Conrad (Kyle), Katie Blanchard Fegert (Geordie), and Hayley Claxton Roberts (Jon), Jimmy Blanchard, Scott Blanchard (Jenny) and Zachary Blanchard. Her great grandchildren, Tori Grubbs Seabury (Ben), Courtney Grubbs, Emily Thomas, George Fegert, Lily Fegert, Ginny Fegert, Vayda Laine Roberts, May Elizabeth Roberts, Isabelle Grace Conrad, Henry Lovett Conrad, Emily Blanchard, Vivienne Blanchard and Elode Blanchard. Her great-great grandchildren, Grace-lynn Bailey, Eli Seabury and Charlie Seabury. Her sisters-in-law Jeanette Caneega and Patsy Claxton, and many nieces and nephews.

Services were held on Monday, Jan. 19, 2026, at Arline Chapel Church, Wrightsville, Georgia, with Jeanette Caneega, Michael Caneega and Rev. Sammy Hall officiating. Visitation was from 12:30 p.m. to 1:45 p.m. and the funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Burial will be held at Westview Cemetery, Wrightsville, Georgia.

Pallbearers will be Jim Claxton, Tommy Logue, Ben Seabury, Geordie Fegert, Kyle Conrad, Michael Caneega, Carmen Caneega, Jon Roberts and Aiden Hall. Honorary Pallbearers former clients and employees of The Johnson Training Center.

Special thanks to the staff at Scott Health and Rehab and to hospice for the special love and care shown to Grace and her family during this difficult time.

In lieu of flowers the family asks that donations be made in memory of Mrs. Claxton to Angels in Flight Recovery Center at 2041 West Elm Street, Wrightsville, GA 31096 and to Arline Chapel Church in C/O Susan Powell at 2040 Tuckers Grove Church Road, Wrightsville, GA 31096.

Senate bill would hold down school property tax

By MARK NIESSE
Capitol Beat News Service

ATLANTA — Tax increases on Georgia homeowners could be limited to the inflation rate — including taxes for education after most school systems decided against capping property tax hikes last year.

The state Senate’s Republican majority introduced a bill this week that would require all school systems to limit property tax increases that occur because of rising home values.

About 71 percent of Georgia’s 180 school systems voted last year to reject the cap, as allowed by state law. This year’s bill would change that law and prevent school systems from opting out of the cap.

If approved, the legislation would save homeowners money — and reduce funding for public education in some areas. School systems would lose the ability to tax property on values that rose higher than the inflation rate in the previous year.

“The majority of people in Georgia aren’t seeing the relief that was promised because they’re continuing to see double-digit tax increases,” said state Sen. Chuck Hufstetler, R-Rome, the lead sponsor of Senate Bill 382. “People have seen huge property tax increases, and we need to limit it to the rate of inflation. We all need to live within our means.”

While no one likes paying higher taxes, schools would pay the price, said John Zauner, executive director of the Georgia School Superintendents Association.

Education expenses would continue to rise with inflation, but school systems would receive less money from property taxes.

“I’m sympathetic. I pay taxes and they’re always going up,” Zauner said. “But that’s the only choice local districts have. They don’t have any other options.”

Under a state law and constitutional amendment approved by voters in 2024, home property assessments are capped at the inflation rate for the previous year. By holding down increases in property values, property tax hikes are also limited because they’re based on the assessed value of a home and the property tax rate.

Besides school systems, the proposed bill would also affect city and county governments that also opted out of the tax cap. About 29 percent of city and county governments voted against capping their property tax values last year, according to records from the secretary of state’s office.

Lt. Gov. Burt Jones said the property tax bill is a priority for this year’s legislative session.

“As part of our ongoing efforts to keep costs low and put more money back in Georgians’ pockets, this legislation will limit increases in home values for property taxes year to year and require more accountability and transparency in our local taxation procedures,” Jones said.

The property tax limit is one of several tax proposals being debated at the Capitol.

Senate Republicans also want to gradually eliminate income taxes, while House Speaker Jon Burns, R-Newington, suggested he favors ending homestead property taxes.

Gov. Brian Kemp said in his State of the State Address on Thursday he wants to give tax rebates averaging $250 per taxpayer, as well as reducing the state income tax rate by one-fifth of a percentage point, to 4.99 percent.

Jury pool complete in murder case

Dublin Courier-Herald
By Doug Hall
Hawkinsville

The final step in jury selection begins Monday in the Cheryl S. Todd-Dessie X Woods murder-robbery trial of Ronnie L. Horne of Laurens County when the defense and prosecution strike a jury from 44 prospective jurors chosen during a long week of qualifying.

If the striking process is speedy and a motion to suppress evidence is decided, attorneys may begin their opening arguments on Monday.

Friday, after five days of questioning, a pool of jurors was completed that includes

- 5 black males
- 19 white males
- 11 black females
- 9 white females.

Twelve jurors and one alternate will be selected from among the pool of qualified prospective jurors.

Defense attorneys will be allowed 20 strikes.

The prosecution will get ten strikes.

Oconee Superior Court Judge James B. O'Connor is expected to hear a motion on Monday by the defense seeking to keep statements made by the defendants out of evidence.

The defense will contend that those statements given at the time of the women's arrests were made involuntarily.

The defendants are charged with murdering and robbing Ronnie L. Horne, 35, of Route 1, Rentz. The shooting took place on June 16 near Mt. Vernon after Horne picked up the two women who were hitching a ride from Reidsville to Atlanta.

The defense says Horne was shot twice in the head when he attempted to make sexual advances toward the women.

In jury qualifying proceedings, defense attorneys emphasized questions concerning the possible racial and sexual prejudices of prospective jurors. Yesterday of 17 prospective jurors who had been qualified for service five were disqualified.

Those disqualified included:

- a black woman who broke down on examination and said she had a sick husband to care for
- white man who said he felt the defendants would have to testify in their own defense
- a white man who had foamed unreasonable opinions about the case
- a white man who had business conflicts
- a white woman who could find no one to care for her small children
- One woman who had been ruled qualified earlier in the week asked to be excused because she also had small children at home. She was excused.

O'Connor is expected to relax a gag order once the final jury is selected. The restraint on comments to newsmen by parties in the trial has been in effect throughout the jury selection process and has prevented interviews with attorneys and defendants relating to the case.

Mrs. Woods is represented by Randy Bacote, an Atlanta lawyer who defended Marcus Wayne Chenault, the convicted killer of Mr. Martin Luther King, Sr.

Mrs. Todd is represented by Mary Joyce Johnson, a member of the Lawyer Project, and Millard Farmer, a wealthy Newnan, Georgia, native, who has established an indigent defense league in Atlanta. Johnson is expected to be lead counsel for Mrs. Todd.

For the State, District Attorney Phillip R. West of Eastman will be joined by special prosecutor Leon Green of Dublin and Bob Sparks, Assistant District Attorney, of Atlanta.

The two women were indicted in Wheeler County, where the alleged crimes took place. The trial was moved to Pulaski County because the judge felt the two could not get a fair trial in Wheeler County due to extensive publicity surrounding the case.

Jurors selected for the pool are under firm orders from the judge not to discuss the case with anyone to be exposed to any news accounts of the case.

The 12-man jury, when selected, will be sequestered for the duration of the trial. They will be housed in an Eastman hotel which will be guarded by two complements of law officers.

The trial is expected to last several weeks.

DHS TROUPE TAKES STATE TITLE AGAIN

For the second straight year, Dublin High School's widely acclaimed Thespian Troupe 669 has been judged best in the State Class AA one act play competition.

This honor came to the Dublin troupe on Saturday at Cedar Shoals High School in Athens where the state competition was held.

Performing the difficult and abstract one-act "Theatre of the Soul," Troupe 669 topped the runner-up, Swainsboro, for first place. Woodward Academy and Therrel High, both of Atlanta, came in third and fourth.

Last year's entry by Dublin, "Darkness Falls on Laughter" also won first place in the state.

Dublin's top showing is the fourth state championship in drama for the troupe under the direction of R. Lynn Woodydy.

The cast of the play follows:

"Theatre of the Soul":

- Chuck Hall
- Jon Taylor
- Fred Byers
- John Kisalus
- Timothy Heard
- Dee Hammond
- Claudia Bannister
- Lisa Kisalus
- Dianne Hammock

No individual awards are given in State competition.

Chuck Hall won Best Actor in Region competition in December.

Dianne Hammock won Best Actress Award in Region.

The crew for this winning one-act was:

- Cathy Hess
- Dorrie Joiner
- Betsy Frost
- Alan James
- David Dixon
- Mark Tarpley
- Bill McMillan
- Ricky Hagler

The Dublin group will compete with four other Georgia high school theatre groups for the right to represent the state at the Southeastern Theatrical Conference in Memphis later this year.

This competition will be held in Dublin.

COMMISSIONERS MULL AMBULANCE SERVICE

Laurens County Commissioners this morning were faced with the problem of whether or not to provide an ambulance service.

Community Ambulance Service, represented by Leon May, made it clear that he was ready to give up the contract with the county for the ambulance service. He insisted that with the subsidy paid by the county he has operated in the red. Richard Stanley of Stanley and Sons Funeral Home, who also operates an ambulance service, also stated that some arrangements other than those used in the past would be necessary for him to be interested in operating the service for the county.

The matter was left open, since there were no bids for the service offered the commissioners with Community Ambulance Service agreeing to continue the service for one more month.

Plans are being made to investigate ambulance operations in other counties to see if a plan can be worked out.

May has insisted that too many runs had been made to Augusta from Laurens County, with patients declaring that the county paid the bills and hence they owed the ambulance service nothing.

The Commissioners also expressed the idea that the present tax setup of the county would not stand a major increase in the costs of the service. Even a referendum on a tax increase for ambulance service was discussed, but no plans were made to call such a vote on the matter.

Both May and Stanley complained that more often than not, they were compelled to remain at the hospital here for up to four and five hours before patients would be accepted and taken off their hands. They also said that they were asked to carry patients from one part of the hospital to another, thus adding to the costs of salaries, etc. to the service.

In other matters, the Commissioners agreed for First District Commissioner Tal Fuqua to remain Chairman for the first four months of 1976. After that time, Third District Commissioner Robert Beacham will serve for four months with Second District Commissioner Herbert Fordham serving the last four months. This usual procedure has been to rotate the chairmanship among the three commissioners on a yearly basis with each one serving as chairman for two of the four years of their term.

At noon today, the Commissioners were offering for sale what land had been declared surplus.

Joe Rutland made a bid of $10,000 for the old County Building (old Post Office). His was the only bid received, and it was accepted subject to confirmation of the county commissioners.

The other piece of property that was auctioned at noon today was the old landfill site near Rentz. John Lowery bid $2,790 for this site, subject to confirmation by the County Commissioners.

The sale was conducted by County Attorney H. Dale Thompson after the property had been advertised for sale.

CITY MANAGER RESIGNS

By Doug Hall

Ron McLemore ended seven months as City Manager of Dublin with a short letter of resignation to the Mayor and Council.

McLemore's employment with the city was terminated on Monday night, but he will be paid through March 5 - an agreement reached between the City Manager and the Council.

Now the hunt begins for a new city manager.

"We had several resumes in the last go-round that we thought we could get in touch with," Mayor Robert E. Cochran said this morning.

Plus, the mayor says that several aldermen have suggested possible candidates for the job.

On the question of an acting city manager, Cochran doubted the city would "go to the extent of appointing someone as an acting city manager."

"But," he explained, "We may want someone as the number two man."

The Mayor met with city department heads this morning to discuss the situation.

A meeting of Council to decide what course to take in replacing McLemore will be held later this week.

McLemore's letter to the mayor and council was succinct and business-like:

"I am submitting my resignation from the position of City Manager of the City of Dublin to be effective March 5, 1976.

"In doing so, I am requesting direct payment for three weeks unused annual leave and direct payment of $1,500 in retirement pay as agreed upon by the city at the time of my appointment.

"I have enjoyed working with my fellow employees and am thankful for the many friends that my family and I have made in Dublin during my term of employment."

He gave no reason for this move. But since the November 3 city election, his tenure as city manager has been on shaky ground. In the election a slate of aldermen not considered favorable to the city manager's policies was elected.

All seven aldermen voted to accept McLemore's resignation.

McLemore has worked with the city for two years, first as Administrative Assistant, then Acting City Manager. He became the city's chief executive officer on May 19, 1975, replacing former City Manager Jack Crane.

During his tenure in Dublin, the Columbus, Georgia, native installed one of the most progressive firemen training program in the South, landed two sizeable Community Development grants, instituted an effective reorganization of the badly aligned sanitation department, and sought to improve the city's financial management.

But he was beset by opposition from a 4-3 Council which hung precariously in his favor.

Then, in the November city election, one of McLemore's supporters on Council, Roy Banks, chose not to seek reelection and two, John Reed Deamer and Louis Alexander, were defeated.

E. DUBLIN COUNCIL TO MEET CITIZENS

A called meeting of the East Dublin City Council and citizens for Tuesday night at 7:30 was announced today by Mayor E.A. Page.

The meeting was called after a group of citizens met earlier and asked for a meeting with the Council to present a petition that they had prepared.

The petition asks the Mayor and Council to return a new pickup truck that was authorized at the Council meeting, rescind the garbage fee ordinance, and reduce the salaries of three city firemen that were raised when the Council by a three to two vote overrode Mayor Page's veto of the raises granted earlier. The petition also asks that the city reduce city spending.

Mayor Page told the group asking for the meeting that he would call the meeting with the understanding that it will be conducted in an orderly fashion.

Rumors for the past several days have been that a recall petition calling for a recall election is being circulated in East Dublin, but nothing could be learned definitely about such plans. Mayor Page said this morning that he had been advised by legal authorities that while a Georgia law was passed for recall elections, it had been declared unconstitutional by the courts.

Thus, whatever plans may have been made for such a petition were squelched with the information as to the fate of the recall provision law.

It was also pointed out that the provisions that made possible a recall election which ousted three County Commissioners in Douglas County, Georgia, were in a local law that applied only to that county.

PHILLIP COLEMAN IS STAR STUDENT

West Laurens High School student Phillip Coleman has been named STAR student at West Laurens and for the Laurens County School System for the 1975-76 school year.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Coleman.

Each year the high school senior who is in the upper 10 percent of his class and who scores highest on the Scholastic Aptitude Test is awarded this honor.

Phillip has maintained an A average throughout high school and has served his school and community.

He is presently serving as President of the Beta Club and of the 4-H Club and is a District 4-H Club Officer, serving on the Board of Directors for the Central District.

OUR TAKE...

Kight was a friend to Laurens Co.

Billy Kight leaves some large shoes to fill. Kight, who passed away Jan. 9 after unexpectedly falling ill, served as county attorney for Laurens County for three decades, but he will be missed for more than his legal expertise.

As commissioners came on and off the board of the years, Kight was a steadying force for the county. He was more than a lawyer on retainer. He showed up every day.

With an unassuming and humble nature, Kight never tried to show off his intelligence, even though he usually was the smartest guy in the room. That's not to say he was shy about speaking up for what's right – whether it was calling out the commission for conducting too much "other business" or cleverly putting a condescending visiting attorney in his place during a meeting.

The sharp-witted Kight could also use humor to bring levity to uncomfortable situations or to get his point across. Last year, when he believed commissioners might not be enthusiastic enough with their recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance, Kight started off the pledge at several meetings with such earnest that the commissioners – and audience – had to join in.

Kight was more than a lawyer. He was a friend to county employees and officials, and a friend to the county. And Laurens County is a better place for it.

Everything is bad - my phone is not working

The message on my phone did not make sense. It said I no longer had a SIM card.

After turning it off, re-setting it and turning the airplane mode on and off several times, I handed it over to my wife. She tried some of that and more, and it started back working. But, from what she had seen on the website, my phone may need to be replaced, so we went ahead and ordered a new one.

My phone worked through the next morning - which was Sunday (Jan. 11) - and then it popped up with that message of having no SIM card. Thankfully, my new phone was delivered the next day. Once again, I handed it over to my wife (she is the IT person at our house) and she worked on getting everything transferred over from my old phone to the new, while I took her phone and went to cover Christian comedian Mickey Bell's talk at Celebrate Recovery.

When I returned home, the phone was in the midst of transferring everything. Since it was getting late, we left my old and new phone alone as the data went from one to the next.

On Tuesday morning, I picked up my new phone and everything seemed good. Just before my wife left to go to work, I tried to place a call to her phone just knowing it would work. Imagine my surprise when I got the message that my new phone did not have a SIM card.

Long story short, it turned out that we had to remove the SIM card out of the old phone and place it in the new phone. My replacement phone did not come with the necessary object, which was a small little pin needed to push the button and eject the card, to get the job done. Once we were able to complete that task - and when I say we I really mean the nice woman at the cellphone store – my new phone sprang to life and I started receiving all of the text messages that I had been missing since Sunday.

When something like this happens, it seems like our day, or days, are ruined. We depend on our phones so much today.

It is funny how much we depend on our cellphones. I remember when my wife - girlfriend at the time - bought her first cell phone. The late 1990s model came in a bag, and you might have needed to pull the antennae to get a signal. At the time, I did not see the need to have a cellphone in the car. Usually, we were together and we did not need two. This was also the time when there were more "phones" and not devices where you could play games, watch shows or read your email.

One Sunday night we were at her parents' house on Lake Sinclair. We left their house for me to return Jill to her college dorm before I returned home. About a mile from her parent's house, Jill started to not feel well. We turned around and I took her back since we were a good 10 to 15 miles from the college. She decided to stay there, so I brought her bag cellphone back to the house and I jumped into the car to return home.

In order to get home, I had to go down about a 10-mile stretch of road where there is basically nothing until you get back into the Milledgeville city limits. As I was driving down this road when all of a sudden my car started sputtering and slowing down. I pulled the blue 1971 Chevrolet Nova completely off the side of the road. This old vehicle's gas gauge had recently stopped working, so we kept up with the mileage on a small notepad. Apparently, I had done the math wrong and was completely out of gas.

It was almost 10 p.m. on a Sunday night on a road that hardly had any traffic on it. So I started walking. Eventually, I was able to get a ride from a nice young man who was able to take me to my preacher's house at the end of the road. The next day, I went into a business and bought my first cellphone.

When my phone messed up the other day, I had to keep going. If something had happened, I would have been able to call 911. But that was it. Some may recall last Wednesday when Verizon had issues. Friends, who did not know about my situation during the previous days, made the statement that I did not know how it felt not to be able to call or text someone.

If they only knew.

Some observations to share with three great-grandsons

Dear Henry, Noah and Samuel Knox Wansley:

It looks like it is your turn to receive some unsolicited advice from an old man who has been dispensing it since your daddy and his cousins were about your age. That has been a long time. I'm not sure how much of it they found helpful, but I hope some of it stuck. Much of what I have to say to you comes from my own life experiences — good and bad.

Some of this may be a little premature, since you three range from shedding baby teeth to learning to read, but I thought I should share my thoughts while I am still able to do so. I hope you will at least put this note away and use it as a reference in the years ahead.

One thing that has changed dramatically in the years since I began this exercise is that the world in which you live has gotten infinitely more complicated, thanks to rapid advances in technology. Technology is a double-edged sword. There is much good to be derived from it. In your lifetime, you may witness cures to diseases unimagined in my lifetime. Tours to faraway planets. Driverless automobiles that can fly. And who knows what else?

There is also a dark side to technology. Misinformation can be spread at the speed of light. People can accuse, insult, slander and malign with complete anonymity. Our electrical grid, our telephone network, our financial and defense systems are vulnerable to bad actors around the world. And there is the question of artificial intelligence and its impact on the future.

It is striking that none of this was a subject for discussion in my previous annual letters to your dad and his cousins. That is how much things have changed in such a short period of time. And yet much has not changed. The basics are still the basics, although given the above premise, applying them will be a challenge for you at times.

Fortunately, you three boys live in a stable environment with two loving parents. Consider yourselves blessed. Your parents are working hard to raise you right. Love them and appreciate them even when you may disagree with them. And, on occasion, you surely will. Being a parent is not an easy job. I know that firsthand.

Thanks to generations of forebears, you have inherited a good name. Do nothing to besmirch it by some careless thought or deed. Whenever it is spoken, read or written, make sure it will make your family proud.

Be a friend to everyone but pick your friends carefully. Don't try to be popular. Be yourself. There will be those who will try to drag you down to their level. By setting a good example, hopefully you can bring them up to yours.

Never say anything you don't mean so you won't give anyone any reason not to trust your word. That is another way of saying don't lie. In my long years on this earth, I can't remember a lie that was beneficial to anyone.

Go to bed each night satisfied you did your very best that day, whether it was in the classroom, on the soccer field or when no one was looking. These days only come one at a time. We have no guarantees there will be a tomorrow. Be your best with every day you are given.

Life doesn't offer shortcuts so don't go looking for them. Deal with life as it comes. There will be days of disappointment and times of frustration. We have all experienced them. You will, too. Stay strong. Be confident. Try to keep things in perspective. This, too, shall pass.

There is a God. I believe that with all my heart and you should, too. God is not Protestant or Catholic, Jewish or Muslim. God is God. Too many people try to justify their prejudices and narrow-mindedness by invoking the name of God. Ignore them. They are bigots. And when you have doubts — as you surely will — just look at the magnificent symmetry of the universe. This stuff didn't just happen. Believe. Believe in God.

There is a pretty good chance I won't be around to see you reach adulthood, but I am confident that even with all the challenges you will face, this will be a better world because you are in it. Thank you for letting me share these thoughts with you. Now, go forward and do good.

Love,
Pa

TO THE EDITOR ...

Dear letter to the editor,
I appreciate the information this paper provides. I chose not to spend a lot of time being informed on politics and articles like this are helpful: Jan. 6, 2026, "Georgia gets nearly $219 million for rural health care. This will bolster health care in 126 rural counties, under a program established by President Donald Trump's signature budget reconciliation bill passed in July." Hopefully this is a sign that according to Stacey Abrams, "Trump's terrible, tyrannical, no good budget," a sign that there is more to the story and that there is some good after all. Opinions are easy to state; it takes a lot more work to find the facts and connect them to reality.

From the kitchen: 22 DPA players medal at Southern Pickleball Championships

Dozens of local players in top 15 of final 2025 rankings

By LAURA CARTER
Dublin Pickleball Association

The Southern Pickleball Championships were held between Dec. 31 and Jan. 4 at Macon’s Rhythm & Rally event center.

The Dublin Pickleball Association (DPA) had 17 members among the 1,059 competitors who qualified by medaling in a Southern Pickleball-sanctioned tournament in 2025.

Players from 27 states battled it out for the honor of reaching the winner’s circle. Locals who made the podium include:

Kirby Smart’s locker room, culture at heart of Bulldogs’ success...

Kirby Smart entered the Sugar Bowl with a winning percentage of 85 percent, which means that at that rate, his teams are going to win a lot of games and championships — but as everybody understands, you can’t win ‘em all.

When the Sugar Bowl loss to Ole Miss was final, and he had a brief respite with his team, he was as pragmatic and insightful as ever. He reminded them not to hang their heads, pointing out that they had much to be proud of.

After all, they were state champs again and they won back-to-back SEC championships. (He never calls attention to himself, so I will do it for him since it is so noteworthy.

His record of 117-21 is the best ever for a coach for his first 10 years on the job.)

Winning back-to-back championships, he told his team, is an occurrence that might not happen for a long time — the SEC is just too competitive, and while he didn’t address the transfer portal, it is obvious that this latent circumstance has caused the most disruption we have seen in college football since 1905 when 18 fatalities almost caused the game of football to be abolished.

The Kirby Smart plan has seen the Bulldogs make the playoffs four out of the last five years. How many communities across the country — and how many fan bases — can realistically see such expectations become reality? Kirby keeps making that happen.

He keeps sending worthy talent to the NFL each spring, but finds a way to win and get into the playoffs where one of the reasons to advance to the ultimate game is good health make coaching a greater challenge today than ever. How much more success would the Bulldog offense have achieved had Drew Bobo played at full strength through the playoffs? How much more effective would the offense have been if there were a durable, stud running back like a Todd Gurley in the backfield, for example?

The Georgia senior class posted a record of 51-6 and since 2021, UGA leads all FBS schools with a record of 65-7.

Ole Miss, a team that came close to reaching the final game, has for decades yearned for yesteryear — the glory days of Coach John Vaught — to return.

By LORAN SMITH

Seasoned observers have noted that it would be difficult with the population base of the state of Mississippi. Lane Kiffin was able to pull it off by going to the portal and bringing in abundant talent, highlighted by a remarkable athlete at quarterback, Trinidad Chambliss.

Among the teams in the College Football Playoff, Georgia had the fewest transfers starting (10 percent) while Ole Miss had the most (66.3 percent). Many seasoned observers suggest that plan will not work, long term, and you see how long it took Kiffin to jump ship — going to LSU which has a much greater recruiting base with far less in state competition than Ole Miss.

Something that is peculiarly significant with Indiana, the favorite to win the national title, is that the average age of their roster is 23. Kids entering college at age 18 and graduating on time usually get their cap and gown at by their 22nd birthday. Those extra years of seasoning make a great difference in competition. Georgia’s average of its 2025 roster was roughly 20.5.

The postgame locker room scene in New Orleans was one which revealed that Georgia’s most recent team had the right stuff. There were a lot of tears, much hugging and feeling as the players said their goodbyes, knowing they likely will never be together again as a group. It was a sincere and compassionate expression of brotherly love.

Nobody was discouraging about the draft or NIL possibilities but how much they enjoyed and appreciated their teammates and their time together in Athens.

The culture the head coach has brought about has resulted in sustained success, but it is very tough to win a championship, especially in today’s college football world, where there is no stability when he comes to roster development.

There are more talented athletes out there than ever before and while many of them greatly appreciate the institutions with which they affiliate, today’s process fosters alignment with the highest bidder.

Have you thought about the predicament which Kirby Smart has brought about? He does such a good job with player development, many players come to Athens and get the benefit of the Georgia system and then move on to where the grass is greener (more money). Kirby simply will not let money spoil the locker room.

The Georgia training regimen is so good that every year the Bulldogs lose a significant portion of their roster to the National Football League. (For the next Super Bowl, Georgia will, for the 25th straight year, have a player on one of the rosters). How ‘bout that streak, which is likely to continue.

It is tough when you train a kid for the NFL and lose a portion of your roster every year when August comes around, but losing players who can move on for any reason certainly makes college football recruiting an inequitable process.

Then when judges get in on the act, directing that a school grant an extra year of eligibility, which happened last fall, you wonder if there will ever be any sanity with college football again.

For the fans who are being called on to support the program, to the extreme, puts more pressure on the coaches to win big. If the championships are not there, then the donors are not going to be there.

As a Georgia alumnus, I am overjoyed with what Kirby Smart has been able to accomplish in Athens. It is the best job in history. It is also the best record of any collegiate program in the state historically.

No coach works harder or smarter. He has two primary interests: his family and coaching the Georgia football team. No coach has ever given his alma mater more energy and effort.

Daughter concerned about parents' heavy screen time!

DEAR ABBY: My young daughter and I had the pleasure of spending three months with my parents while my husband was deployed. We had a lovely visit, but over the course of our stay, I noticed my parents were spending more time on their phones than previously. Both are retired and in their mid-60s.

I'm glad they are keeping up with technology, but I'm also concerned that their phone use may have a negative impact on their social health, behavioral health and mental acuity as they age. Growing up, we never had the TV or computers in our main living space, and screen time was limited. We ate dinner together every night, and socialization and conversation was an expectation.

During my stay, my parents brought their phones to the dinner table and grabbed them midmeal to answer messages or search things on the internet. Throughout the days, I'd look up from what I was doing and see them glued to their screens. This new behavior is so different from the way they raised me. How can I speak to them about my concerns and encourage them to consider decreasing their phone usage? -- NOTICED THE CHANGE IN WASHINGTON

DEAR NOTICED: Yes, many things have changed since the time when you were raised. But if you think the day has arrived for you to parent your parents, forget about it.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

It not only won't work, but it could also cause resentment because they are adults and not impressionable teenagers being educated about social interaction.

DEAR ABBY: My college roommate and I became close friends. I always thought he was a little bit arrogant. When I caught him getting upset that a girl liked me and not him, I realized he has always been about comparing and competing.

At age 30, after we ended up working for the same company, we had a falling-out. I'm sure he has his complaints about me, but I am no longer interested in being his friend. We're 36 now and still involved in our fantasy football league, so we see each other from time to time. We're generally civil to each other, especially for the sake of the league.

Well, he now wants to rekindle the friendship and keeps asking me to hang out. I've made excuses so far, and I wish he would take a hint, but I'm afraid I'm going to have to eventually tell him (again) that I'm not interested in hanging out. I don't want to hurt his feelings any more than I have to. Please help. -- NOT FEELING IT IN KANSAS

DEAR NOT FEELING IT: You are not obligated to have anything more to do with this person than you wish. If the only time the two of you interact is during the fantasy football season, he shouldn't be too hard to avoid. When he asks to hang out, continue doing what you have been, which is to say you are busy. Eventually, he may take the hint.

♠ A K 10 ♥ J 8 6 5 ♦ A Q 7 ♣ A 7 6

Right-hand opponent opens 1D. What call would you make?

A - We think this is slightly too strong for 1NT. Double, planning to bid NT next unless partner bids hearts.

Q 2 - North-South vulnerable, as South, you hold:

♠ K 10 9 4 ♥ A K Q 6 4 ♦ Void ♣ J 7 6 4

SOUTH WEST NORTH EAST
1♥ Pass 2NT* Pass
*Game-forcing heart raise, at least four trumps

What call would you make?

A - Slam is possible, but partner must have a club control. Bid 3D showing shortness. Give partner a chance to make a control bid in clubs.

Q 3 - East-West vulnerable, as South, you hold:

♠ K Q 10 7 5 ♥ K J 7 ♦ 3 ♠ A K Q 9

SOUTH WEST NORTH EAST
1♠ 2♥ Pass 1♠ Pass
? What call would you make?

A - Don't double. Your heart strength means partner is unlikely to have trap passed and you can't stand a diamond bid from him. Bid 3C.

Q 4 - Both vulnerable, as South, you hold:

♠ Q J 10 9 7 4 ♥ Void ♦ K J 7 6 5 ♣ K 7

As dealer, what call would you make?

A - Way too strong for 2S. Open 1S.

Q 5 - North-South vulnerable, as South, you hold:

♠ 7 ♥ 10 7 6 ♦ K Q 10 5 ♠ A K 6 5 4

As dealer, what call would you make?

A - 1C will leave you with an awkward rebid should partner respond 1S or 1NT. Open 1D, planning to rebid 2C.

Q 6 - East-West vulnerable, as South, you hold:

♠ A 10 8 5 4 ♥ 8 ♦ A 10 6 5 3 ♣ 10 8

NORTH EAST SOUTH WEST
1♠ 1♠ Pass 1♠ Pass

What call would you make?

A - This decent hand just got better. If you're not willing to bid 4S, at least make a game try of 3D. We prefer 3D, barely.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

and reduce pedestrian and bicycle incidents and deaths.

“They will be coming in and looking at everything from our city ordinances, policies, road construction, development and regulations that we have in place,” Powell said. “They’ll make recommendations and will come up with a plan that we can actually do in the future when it comes to safety.”

They will take this plan and use it to apply for implementation funds as they may become available in the future.

“I’m very excited to get started on this,” Powell said.

City Councilwoman Tess Godfrey announced that new councilman Brandon Chain will be on that particular board.

“We look forward to hearing what he brings back to us,” she said.

Powell added that the public will be engaged in this process as well.

In other business, the city council:

- Approved the purchase of a new pump for the trickling filter at the wastewater treatment plant from Xylem Water Solutions USA Inc. in the amount of $23,105.95.
- Approved a Visin Zero Safety Action Plan. Powell said they want to have a plan in place by the beginning of June.
- Approved the terms and conditions for the Dublin Police Department to apply for the Governor’s Office of Highway Safety Highway Enforcement of Aggressive Traffic Grant for 2027. If awarded, the grant period would begin in October of 2026.
- Approved items as declaration of surplus that will be sold on GovDeals or for scrap.

CORONER'S COUNCIL

certification requirements before they are authorized to serve. The council is responsible for overseeing those standards and disciplinary actions for all coroners and deputy coroners in the State of Georgia.

The council is made up of five elected coroners, a licensed physician and the superintendent of the Law Enforcement Operations and Investigations Section, or a designated representative. Together, the group establishes training policies, certification standards and continuing education requirements for coroners throughout Georgia.

The five Coroner Council members are Chairman Richard N. Stanley III, Laurens County; Vice-Chairman Michael Fowler, Dougherty County; Janice Brown, Wilcox County; Mark Bowen, Richmond County; and Mark Cox, Lumpkin County.
